Winner of the 'WA Racing Industry Award' was Broad Nominees. Kim Broad and his wife Tania operate Broad Nominees. Kim is a skilled farrier and their clientele are studs, race horse trainers and vet clinics. He also lectures at the Equine Training Centre in Armadale. Kim is an active member of the Western Australian Farriers Association and believes that you can never stop learning, having recently completed a 5 day international exam to become the only Advanced Skills Farrier in W.A.

Sponsor of the award, Marjorie Charleson, from Racebreed Australia said, "Racebreed Australia was for ten years the ONLY commercially independent publication based in Western Australia promoting the thoroughbred breeding and racing industry through newsagents and subscribers across Australia and into New Zealand. Other WA publications were "house magazines" produced by local industry associations for the local market. Racebreed was previously a three-time winner of the Small Business Awards in the Categories of Tourism, Marketing and the initial Racing Industry Award before becoming a sponsor of the latter category. I have been the sole proprietor, publisher and editor of the magazine since 1998 when it appeared as Racing West prior to the name change in 2000. Racebreed Australia was inducted into the Belmont Small Business Awards HALL OF FAME in 2011. I am thrilled that such a deserving business won the WA Racing Industry Award this year. Well done to Kim and his team".
